

WRITING IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST:
SERVICE-LEARNING
AND THE WRITING CLASSROOM

Edited by

David D. Cooper
and Laura Julier

Curriculum in the Academy and the World
Monograph Series
Series Editor: Patricia Lambert Stock

Editorial Board: Robert Coles, Harvard University;
Maxine Greene, Teachers College, Columbia
University; Mike Rose, University of California, Los Angeles; David Scott, University of Massachusetts;
Karl A. Smith, University of Minnesota; Geneva
Smitherman, Michigan State University; Jody Swilky,
Drake University

East Lansing:
The Writing Center at Michigan State University
1995

Acknowledgments

The Service-Learning Writing Project gratefully acknowledges colleagues who have given the material, intellectual, and collegial support necessary to sustain our work during the past two years: Esther Onaga, Acting Executive Director of the Michigan Campus Compact; John Eadie, Dean of the College of Arts and Letters, Michigan State University, and Associate Dean Patrick McConeghy; Mary Edens, Director of MSU's Service-Learning Center; Patricia Lambert Stock, Sharon Thomas, Jill Johnson, and Anne Derengoski, the Writing Center; Marylee Davis, Associate Vice President, University Relations; and the Offices of the Provost, the Vice Provost for University Outreach, and the Vice President for Research and Graduate Studies, Michigan State University. Special thanks to our colleagues and friends at Stanford University's Community Service Writing Project, a national model of writing instruction and service education: Tim Stanton and Janet Luce of the Haas Center for Public Service; Kenneth Fields, Director of the Program in Writing and Critical Thinking at Stanford; and, in particular, Marjorie Ford and Ann Watters whose vision, insight, commitment and good sense pervade our own work. Many of the forms we adapted from early drafts for our "Service-Learning Writing Project Student Resource Packet" are now available for general classroom use in Ann Watters and Marjorie Ford (eds.), A Guide for Change: Resources for Implementing Community Service Writing (New York: McGraw-Hill, 1995).

D.D.C.
L.J.

Contents

Reconceiving Scholarship in the Land Grant University: A Preface	5
Patricia Lambert Stock
Writing and the Arts of Public Discourse: The Service-Learning Writing Project at Michigan State University	7
David D. Cooper and Laura Julier
The SLWP: Inventing Our Roles	15
Sharon Thomas
The Service-Learning Center: A Link in the Chain	21
Mary Edens
Community Service-Learning: Two Student Views
An Education Lived Is an Education Learned	23
Joan Cripe
Mandatory Community Disservice	25
Nathan Werner
SLWP Curriculum Materials	28
SLWP Student Resource Packet	48
Suggestions for Participating Agencies	61
Moving Towards Collaboration	63
Rocky Ray Beckett
A Portfolio of Student Projects	67
Michigan Literacy, Inc.
Whitehills Health Care Center
Catholic Social Services/St. Vincent Home for Children
Eaton-Clinton-Ingham Community Mental Health Board
“Ready for the Challenge”: A Student Reflects on the Service-Learning Writing Project
Bibliography	80
Martha D. Merrill

